

THE VALERA SAYS REVENUE FROM IRELAND IS USED TO OPPRESS HER

GIVES FIGURES TO SHOW HOW COUNTRY IS DRAINED

IS IRELAND A SMALL NATION?

By EAMON DE VALERA,
President of the Irish Republic.

Looking at the map of the world, Ireland seems but a speck in comparison with this half-continent, the United States. It is no more than two-thirds the size of the Empire State of New York, barely the size of the great Lake Superior.

It is truly a small nation, but it is a big nation compared with small nations as they are reckoned on the European Continent.

In Europe at the outbreak of the Great War, not to speak of the States newly established, there were, including Montenegro, no less than eleven sovereign, independent States, the rights of which, if we except a technical flaw in the case of Montenegro, were co-equal with the rights of any of the great powers.

Ireland exceeded five of these in extent, four in population, and no less than seven in revenue. Ireland is nearly three times the size of Belgium, more than two and a half times the size of Holland, as big as Holland, Belgium and Montenegro combined, bigger than Denmark and Switzerland combined, nearly as big as Portugal, and as big as Serbia, Greece or Bulgaria before the accessions of territory which they gained during the Balkan wars.

The Population of Ireland

Ireland's population, depleted by one-half though it has been within living memory, is still today nearly twice the population of Norway, once and a half that of Denmark, and greater than that of Switzerland by half a million. It is the same practically as the population of Serbia, Bulgaria and Greece.

The population of Ireland is nearly double the population of Cuba, though Ireland is less than three-fourths the size of Cuba. The population of Ireland is greater than the populations of Chile, Costa Rica, Ecuador, Guatemala, Honduras, Nicaragua, Panama, Paraguay, San Salvador and Uruguay, all sovereign States on the American Continent.

That is the position today, even after the depopulation of the last twenty years, a depopulation for which there is no parallel among civilized people.

Were our position what it was before the famine artificially created by England, whose statesmen regarded Ireland's increasing population as a menace—were our position what it was in 1841, we could say that to Europe only France, England, Prussia and Spain equalled or exceeded Ireland. In that year, 1841, we had more people on our island than there were in Sweden, Norway, Holland and Greece combined. We had two men to every man in Belgium, two men to every man in Bavaria, more than two men to every man in Portugal, more than two men to every man in Italy, more men than Northern Italy and far more men than Rumania, Bulgaria, Serbia, Albania and Turkey in Europe all put together. And we had three men, almost, to England's five.

What England's Rule Costs Ireland

So much for size and population. Let us now turn to national revenue. Taking a pre-war year, the year 1912, Ireland's revenue was $48,150,000. If we take the English sovereign as equal to two dollars, the revenue of Norway in that year was less than this by almost one-eighth, the revenue of Denmark still less, the revenue of Greece, Bulgaria and Serbia were but roughly one-half, and the revenue of Switzerland but one-third that of Ireland.

Ireland's revenue exceeds that of Bolivia, Chile, Colombia, Costa Rica, Cuba, Ecuador, Guatemala, Honduras, Nicaragua, Panama, Paraguay, San Salvador and Uruguay.

The revenue of these small powers were all used to develop their own resources, to improve their national property as well as to maintain their independence.

The revenue of Ireland, even the fraction of it that was spent in Ireland, was used, not to develop Ireland, but to keep Ireland in comparative poverty and dependency. Ireland has never had even for the royal with which she is strangled, for the knife with which her throat is cut.

With their national revenues, these States maintained their national governments, conducted their national armies, in some cases their national navies, while providing internally for their police forces, agriculture, industry, transit, the education of the young and the support of the aged and infirm, all on a lower taxation per head than the people of Ireland have to pay the British exchequer for the privilege of being exploited. And in addition, and in addition, while the people of these countries in no instance as much as one-half what England's rule directly costs the people of Ireland.

What the Money Would Do

Why, for the money we were forced to pay last year to England we could run the entire government business of at least three European countries—Denmark, Greece, Switzerland—paying for all their police, soldiers, ships and guns.

In Switzerland, Serbia, Bulgaria, Greece, Sweden and Portugal liberty cost per head that year respectively only $5.57, $7.22, $12.14, $15, while in Ireland political and economic slavery cost last year $40 per head. The estimated amount of revenue for the current year is $50,000,000 pounds, that is to say, $250,000,000, or $50 per head.

Costly and extravagant as is the English administration of Ireland, out of the $174,000,000 paid by Ireland last year to the English treasury Ireland was left only $45,000,000 in Ireland, less than one-half, and pocketed the handsome surplus of $91,015,000, as a direct profit from Ireland. This surplus profit to the British treasury this current year is estimated to amount to $109,500,000.

The following comparison with the small nations of Europe will make my argument clear. The statistics are taken from the Statistical Year Book, and are for the year 1912, which was the year preceding the war:

Nation	Area in Sq. Miles	Population	Revenue (Pounds)	Trade (Pounds)
Montenegro	5,053	516,000	4,890,000	439,927
Belgium	11,373	7,423,784	32,311,520	238,418,000

Finally, let us turn to the question of Irish rule. It comes as a surprise to Americans, I have noticed, to be told that Ireland's trade with England is greater than her trade with any other country, whatever the United States alone excepted. This can be proved by the following figures taken from the Statesman's Year Book. The figures are for the year 1912.

Nation	Exports to Ireland (Pounds)	Imports from Ireland (Pounds)

"Finally, Harden shares the guilt in the Versailles peace of disgrace because, after the collapse of the German people, he was one of the most ardent advocates of the Brest-Litovsk peace.

"It made their will charged against the war-guilty Germany his own, and afforded to the government and the peace delegation, of every moral standard and respect, and he strengthened the Brest-Litovsk peace by his support, and he helped them to out of their people and his government every thing, even to the confession of sole guilt in the responsibility for the war."

VON TIRPITZ SAYS ENGLAND SOUGHT TO AVERT WAR IN 1914

DESCRIBES "ASTONISHING" ACTION OF HALDANE

VON TIRPITZ MEMOIRS.

BY ALFRED VON TIRPITZ,
Grand Admiral of the German Navy.

ENGLAND HAD A SINCERE DESIRE TO AVERT WAR IN 1914. The Siberian issue would not have forced her to fight if there had not been greater things at stake. I will show my reasons for this statement later.

First I want to describe the pre-war visit of Lord Haldane to Berlin—that visit which caused such a political storm in England and which is still a matter of mystery to Germany. I never have been able to determine whether the offers which he made were flimsy attempts on the part of England to deter us from entering the conflict or whether they were merely the misdirected efforts of the British Secretary of War, made without sanction by his government in the hopes that he could personally preserve peace by inducing his government to endorse his offers.

(As it is British government disavowed all knowledge of Haldane's efforts in Berlin, it is obvious that his mission was a purely self-appointed one.—EDITOR'S NOTE.)

At any rate, I characterize the cry of the Tories in England that Haldane was pro-German as unfounded and absurd. He is an able and extremely clever lawyer, but one of those British statesmen who considered it easy to hoodwink our politicians. I must admit that some of our performances might even seem to justify this belief on the part of the British.

The Italian conference an origin of the design was too obvious. Once before, after 1898, England had attempted to halt our sense of her growing antagonism to Germany by an offer of the Portuguese colonies in Africa, while at the same time they promised the Portuguese not to ally them and secretly strengthened the hand of Portugal.

After 1898 the relations between Great Britain and Germany were somewhat strained because of British sympathy for the United States in the Spanish-American War, in which Germany was on the point of actively supporting Spain. There were also points of dispute growing out of the Russian revolution in China. Von Tirpitz described refers to one or the other of these situations or both.—Editor's Note.

Haldane's feigned negotiations really offered a sugar-coated pill of submission which would give us the semblance of a political agreement by which we would acquire certain colonies if in return we would become practically a tributary state to England.

In the face of his declaration in the opening of the conference that he spoke with the authority of the British Cabinet, when the audience was closed Haldane announced us by stating that all which he had proposed merely bore the character of a private inquiry. To our amusement we were told later that his visit to Berlin had been without sanction from his government and that his political enemies were accusing him of pro-Germanism because of it.

Haldane's visit to Berlin took on such political importance in England that it seems probable to give the English version of the incident.

Even in British political circles it was scarcely supposed that Haldane, then Secretary of War, went to Berlin on a mission from the King and Cabinet. He spent a week in Berlin, and not only met the Kaiser with Von Tirpitz, as the latter reported, but also had the presence of Bethmann-Hollweg. In view of the relations between Von Tirpitz and the Chancellor, the admiral must have been talking about this second audience.

It is a fact that Haldane's return to England, Berlin went a great way toward the German Ambassador in London as to the Cabinet's decision on eighteen points, which if taken closed had been arranged as a basis of negotiations in the Russian conference, and stating that Haldane had secured a right from the British government to make a purely self-appointed mission to the Kaiser.

grandfatherly in his position. What a contrast. It was evident that Italy could not much longer be held off from Austria. It had become certain that England was beginning to hold off from Austria. It was evident that Italy could not much longer be held off from Austria. It had become certain that England was beginning to hold off from Austria.

It was this same stupid diplomacy which permitted Japan to be signed against us. I was at Grand Headquarters in Coblentz when I learned of the Japanese ultimatum. It was a most humiliating thing. It was a most humiliating thing. It was a most humiliating thing.

"Bill" Masters Now With the American Balanced Six

W. C. Masters, who for the past seven years has been identified with the Mitchell-Lucas Co., has joined the American Motor Car Corporation, distributor of the American Balanced Six. While his old title is that of sales manager, it is understood that Mr. Masters is the assistant to J. D. Lucas, in the management of the affairs of the company.

Mr. Masters, who is a friend of his friends, has been connected with the automobile business since 1914. He was with the old Dodge Motor Vehicle Company which sold the Type A cars. (This company is not to be confused with the American Brothers of Detroit.)

Later he sold Pontiac with the Lucas Company and since the formation of the American Motor Car Corporation, he has been active in the distribution of Mitchell cars in New England.

Mr. Masters said yesterday: "I have been watching the American Balanced Six for the past two years, and when an opportunity was given to affiliate with the New England American Motor Corporation, it did not take me long to make up my mind to join it. I believe in the car and feel that it has a big future before it."

Canteen on Common Is Reopened for Guardmen

The Army and Navy Canteen on the Common has been reopened at the request of General Samuel D. Parker, commander of the State Guard, to provide suitable quarters for the guardmen when off duty. Chairman Felix Vorenberg and Robert S. Weeks of the board of trustees, with Mrs. Evelyn Peck, chairman of the operating committee of the canteen, have arranged a program that will include every member of the State force.

The canteen, which opened last Friday because of the orders restricting the leaving of soldiers and sailors quartered about this city, due to the uncertainties of the police strike, has equipment to serve over 3,000 men daily. A large reception room, containing books, magazines, musical instruments and other home comforts, will be placed at the disposal of the guardmen, between 9 a. m. and 10:30 p. m. every day during their tour of duty in this city.

The 101st is a new K Company, and the question has arisen whether it is to be reorganized of the State militia.

WANTS EDUCATION FREE TO VETERANS

Washington, Sept. 17.—Educational facilities for all veterans of the war with Germany would be provided at the government expense under the provisions of a bill introduced in the House by Senator Leonard of Wisconsin.

The articles will be sold by Michael J. Brophy, who has performed this duty for the government for several years. The articles can be inspected today at Room 417 in the Federal Building.

LOOK OVER YOUR CAR AND AVOID EXPENSE

"Every motorist should spend a few hours each week looking after his car," says W. H. Gleason of the Utterback-Gleason, Inc. distributors for Dart motor cars. "While a car is in operation, it is a piece of machinery, costing considerable money, and during the time he figures regarding such an investment should take, there would be more satisfied automobile owners and better results from their cars."

It is just good business to do it and the cost of a car is not so high. The car would like to see every owner to do it.

NOTED AUTHOR'S DAUGHTER IN VAUDEVILLE

Virginia Futrelle Winning Favor as "Merry Widow" in Musical Fantasy

She had a famous father but declined to share his laurels. She had a noted mother, but refused to stand in the limelight that surrounds the latter. She came to stand in her own shoes, and earn her own laurels, and so she has discarded the celebrated names which to her, and is appearing under that of Virginia Futrelle.

Really she is Miss Virginia Futrelle, daughter of Jacques Futrelle, the author, who was lost in the Titanic disaster seven years ago. As a fascinating "Merry Widow," she appears this week in Killy's Theatre in "The Rainbow Cocktail," a musical fantasy produced by Laurence Schwab. The resemblance to her father is so striking that old friends of the family gazed when she first stepped onto the stage with thrills of recognition.

OLD FRIENDS VISIT THEATRE. And many old family friends have visited the theatre this week, for Miss Virginia is a Boston girl, and is only following out the traditions of the family in beginning her professional career in this city. It was here that her father first made his reputation. It was here that her mother first began to write. As members of the noted writers colony at Nahant they acquired two houses there, and Virginia was brought up in a literary atmosphere.

It is gratifying to the town while father and mother were best sellers," she explained to a new friend here. A tall, handsome girl, extremely dark in contrast to her mother's lighter type of beauty, she has a distinction of manner, but her first appearance before the footlights, with her black hair, a naturally vivid coloring and extraordinary eyes, as large and dark, that they do not seem the stage makeup to which less gifted sisters resort.

GRAND OPERA HER GOAL.

"Here comes trouble," says the head of the place, when she appears. But she also has won friends in the audience as to each other. "Here comes a future star." For, grand opera is Miss Futrelle's goal, and she has already started well on her way by choosing good vocal teachers and really learning how to sing. A soprano voice with a lower register of rich contralto quality is hers, and she knows how to use it. Her studies were begun in Boston with Miss Josephine Knight, and continued in New York with Miss Renard, the teacher of Anna Chav, the soprano.

That is what they say now. Some day people are going to say, "Miss Futrelle, the teacher of Virginia Futrelle."

FALSE ALARMS WAKE

GUESTS IN HOTELS

Fire alarms from Boxes 1256 and 1257 were sounded early today, and both are located opposite hotels many guests were needlessly aroused from their slumbers. The former box is in the City Hall Annex, and many of Young's Hotel guests were awakened at the sound of the apparatus. Crossed wires evidently caused the alarm to be sounded.

The other box was sounded from Hanover and Portland streets, where a passively noticed steam blowing over the roof at No. 31, Hanover street, which is directly across the street from the American House.

FAMOUS TRIPLET IS

VISITING OLD HOME

North Adams Sept. 17.—Having visit to his old home in Clarkburg for the first time in fifteen years, Ambrose Africa of Boston, Cal., the only surviving one of the famous African triplets, who until the death of the first of their number in 1916, were the oldest triplets in the United States, is renewing old acquaintanceships. One of the brothers died in 1916 and the other in 1917. The surviving brother is now seventy-three years of age.

STEPS FROM CAR AND

IS KILLED BY AUTO

Daniel O'Brien, seventy-six, married, living at No. 11A Mount Vernon street, received injuries from which he died at the City Hospital as a result of being struck by an automobile while alighting from a car opposite No. 84 Dorchester avenue. The auto was owned by William Miller, No. 371 Alfred street, Charlestown, and driven by John J. Donohue, No. 27 Green street, Newport, R. I.

GRAND OPERA IS GOAL OF YOUTHFUL ACTRESS

Virginia Futrelle has discarded names for that of Virginia Futrelle, that she may earn her own laurels before the footlights.

It was raised in the way garden of J. Lester Morgan, clerk in the store, and is perfectly shaped to represent an article now fallen into disrepute.

BOSTON JEWELER DEAD

HELPED BURN U. S. AUTOS IN FRANCE

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 17.—Charges of inefficiency, brutality and waste destruction of government property were made against officers operating the motor transport reconstruction park at Verdun, France, before Representative Roscoe C. McCulloch of the committee on expenditures in the War Department at the first hearing. Sergeant Robert L. Harst alleged that Colonel Harry A. Hegenan of Chicago and other officers in charge of the park permitted auto parts and materials valued at more than $100,000 to deteriorate by leaving them in piles or to place them under cover.

NATICK SEWER CHIEF MUST BE PUT BACK

Otherwise, Say Voters of Town, the Whole Board Shall Resign

Natick must reinstate the chief engineer of its sewer board, William F. Cribbs, or the whole board will be forced to resign. This was voted in town meeting, on a resolution introduced by L. N. Quirk, candidate for Representative. It also was voted to petition the Legislature to consolidate the sewer and public works departments into a public works department.

The meeting was a lively one, in which both the sewer board and the town assessors were severely flayed. It was charged that valuations were excessive and unequally distributed. A petition that the State tax commission investigate assessments on personal and real estate was adopted. A petition of the assessors for increased salaries was rejected, pending their investigation. The members of the board asked for a five percent increase. The present salary of the chairman is $1500.

Action on an article requesting the district attorney to investigate alleged violations of the eight-hour law in town departments was postponed.

Double-breasteds

YOU see from the illustration that "double-breasted" doesn't mean exactly what it used to mean.

This season we've made the double-breasted coat a new thing.

Notice the high-chested, high-waisted effect; buttons are placed high; there's more flare to the coat skirts.

It gives young men the lithe, athletic look—so different from the solid, bulky appearance that the old double-breasted sometimes gave.

Double-breasteds are the most popular styles of the season as we make them. All-wool fabrics; high class tailoring; satisfaction guaranteed.

HARVARD SQUAD IS REDUCED TO 58 CANDIDATES

Harvard's varsity football squad, which has been cut from 107 to 58 men, had another hard day on Soldiers Field. The cut was made by Head Coach Bob Fisher, after consultation with his lieutenants, and eleven or twenty more men will be dropped before the season is half over.

Coach Fisher told the second team to go back to their quarters until a regular coach is appointed. He admitted that a few of these might possibly be men who should have been in the team, and if their work shows them worthy of better things there is always a place waiting on the varsity squad.

The team, which is now composed of 11 ends, 12 tackles, 6 guards, 5 centers, 4 quarters and 11 backs. The entire roster is presented as follows:

MR. SCHWAB EXPECTS A BOOM IN BUSINESS

Charles M. Schwab, chairman of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, has changed his mind regarding the industrial and commercial situation, and now expects a big boom for the United States in the future.

He was doubtful as to the future, but he has changed his mind. While in Pittsburgh, he said, "I am in America has made me more optimistic."

He was given a most interesting view of the situation of our country, and he passed through it in a most interesting way.

Just as much as the international situation is readjusted, the American financial and industrial world will have more pronounced progress and growth right into the future, which means more prosperity for the United States.

He is a situation which is a most interesting one, and he passed through it in a most interesting way.

THE LESSON OF TODAY'S GLORIOUS ANNIVERSARY

This is the anniversary of the adoption of the Constitution of the United States, September 17, 1787.

Today 132 years ago was finished, in the words of Gladstone, "the most wonderful work ever struck off at a given time by the brain and purpose of man."

The men of extraordinary foresight and sagacity who did that debated several days whether to confide the power of making treaties to the President or to the Senate.

The original draft of the Constitution, reported by the committee of detail, gave the power to the Senate alone. So did the completed Constitution as reported to the Federal Convention. (Ferrand's Records of the Federal Convention, 11, 169-183.)

The Convention afterward changed this for two reasons: First, it was urged that the Executive might better initiate negotiations, with the advice and consent of the Senate; and, second, secrecy is sometimes necessary in negotiating treaties other than treaties of peace. This was proved later when President Jefferson negotiated with Napoleon the purchase of Louisiana.

But James Madison, later President of the United States, "a very wise, silent man," strongly urged the Convention to adopt an amendment, providing that two-thirds of the Senate could make treaties even without the President's consent.

Some future President might be too self-willed or stiff-necked or obstinate to accept the advice and consent of the Senate, or too vacillating in principle for the Senate to rely upon his consistent, steadfast support of any policy.

Madison said that "a President would naturally derive so much power and importance from a state of war that he might be tempted even to impede a treaty of peace." (Ferrand, 11, 495-574.)

Elbridge Gerry said, and the Convention agreed, that the concurrence of "a greater, rather than a less, proportion of votes in the Senate should be required in making treaties of peace" than in making any other kind of treaties.

So the final result of several weeks' discussion and deliberation by these wise men was this provision of the Constitution, which for brevity, simplicity and clarity could not be improved:

The President shall have power, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, to make treaties, provided two-thirds of the Senators concur.

The word "provided" has, of course, great significance, as it denotes the only condition under which treaties can be made.

When, therefore, President Wilson insists that the Senate shall have no voice or part and shall exercise no judgment of its own in making the most important treaty ever made, he runs counter to the spirit and letter of the Constitution, against all precedents, and the wisdom of the collective wisdom of the Senate has often in the past greatly improved treaties, and has sometimes saved the country from errors of judgment by well-meaning, patriotic Presidents.

President Washington yielded to the Senate amendments in the all-important Jay treaty with England, which he personally approved.

President Polk gave way to the Senate in the Mexican treaty. President McKinley was overridden by a Senate of his own party when it rejected the first Hay-Pauncefote treaty for the Panama Canal, as everyone now admits, wisely.

President Roosevelt consented to important Senate amendments in the Algeciras treaty.

President Wilson must yield to the Senate even as the greatest of Presidents have yielded.

U. S. Senator Walsh's Pledge on the League of Nations

We notice that the advocates of the present form of a League of Nations have obtained the assistance of that attenuated remnant of the great body of intellectual liberals, who formed the elite corps of President Wilson's political followers during the first six years of his administration, to do a little bear-baiting of Senator Walsh concerning his attitude towards the League of Nations.

Mr. Demarest Lloyd and Mr. Chester R. Lawrence have been selected to lead the attack. The selection was a good one because these two gentlemen are widely known in Massachusetts for their sincerity, intelligence and liberalism. But now and then a liberal with an obstinate disposition finds it hard to change the direction in which he is looking, though the object itself has changed completely out of his line of sight. This apparently is the case of Mr. Lloyd and Mr. Lawrence in their failure to follow their comrades in liberalism against the form of the League of Nations so shockingly different from every liberal conception of a real league of nations.

Messrs. Lloyd and Lawrence open their attack on Senator Walsh as follows:

It is well known hereabouts that formidable pressure is being brought to bear upon you by Irish friends to induce you to oppose ratification of the treaty of peace and League of Nations covenant as retaliation against the President and the Peace Conference for not having given immediate and favorable attention to the aspirations of Irish Nationalists.

Now, this is a bad misstatement of facts. This newspaper would be the last to accuse Messrs. Lloyd and Lawrence of any intention to commit so serious an offense as to misstate a fact concerning an important public question during its discussion. But however innocent the fault on their part, it is none the less a serious misrepresentation.

So far as the Irish-American citizen is concerned we have not discovered that he cares a two-pence about the President's mistreatment of the Irish delegates at Paris. Their objection to the League of Nations is that it proposes to make America aid Great Britain to continue her oppression of Ireland, an oppression that no honest and well-informed man anywhere in the world has ever denied, an oppression which is not denied by the majority of Englishmen and is indeed admitted by a considerable majority of Englishmen, whose House of Commons have four times attempted by overwhelming votes to correct the injustice. That it has not been corrected long ago is due to the undemocratic form of the British Constitution and the undue influence which the Tory class, that combination of big business, great landlords and church hierarchy, has always exerted in Great Britain through the House of Lords and certain established forms of corruption.

The indignation in America over the misconduct in Ireland did not begin after the arrival of the Irish immigrants to America or after their rise to a considerable political influence in this country. Long years before, even before we were an independent nation, when an Irishman was a curiosity in the country, when we heard of him only because the world, as President Wilson truly says, is a whispering gallery for the wrongs of nations, we considered the Irish patriots to be our brethren and comrades in arms against British tyranny. Our American Congress, assembling after the Battle of Lexington, adopted an address, dated July 28, 1776, to the people of Ireland, of which the following is a quotation:

Accept our most grateful acknowledgments for the friendly disposition you have always shown towards us. We know that you are not without your grievances. We sympathize with you in your distress . . . and we acknowledge with pleasure and gratitude that your nation has produced patriots who have nobly distinguished themselves by the cause of humanity and America.

The sympathy of the American people for the cause of Ireland was even more outspoken before the rise of the Irish element in America than it has been since, perhaps, because our public men hesitated to express their natural feelings in behalf of a monstrously oppressed nationality lest they be accused of seeking the support of the Irish-American vote. Until lately America has never hesitated to express indignation at the oppression by a powerful people of a weaker people, nor have we ever hesitated to give political asylum to those patriots who have dared to rise against oppression and, having failed, have fled to us for safety and comfort. Quite in keeping with the President's insulting refusal to receive the Irish delegates at Paris was his refusal to see the representatives of the Egyptian Parliament who came to him for the purpose of reminding him that they, too, fought against Germany's reliance upon the President's principle of self-determination, quite in keeping also with this new and strange attitude on the part of an American President is the refusal of asylum to those distinguished and patriotic Indians who are now under arrest in America at the request of the British government for having agitated against the continuance of the two hundred years of British oppression in India. The presence of nations, international law itself, requires us to give asylum to these Indians, but the President's idea of the "new freedom," his weird interpretation of the "right of self-determination of peoples," his grotesque interpretation of his own pledge that under the new order of things no longer "shall the powerful oppress the weak," has permitted these East Indians to be arrested in the United States and will probably permit them to be delivered up to British spies in this country to be transported to British prisons—a shameless act which we shall never live down so long as it is remembered.

There were no Irish in America of consequence in the early forties, yet in 1843 throughout this country, in every great city and all through the countryside, public meetings that had the character of a general assembly of citizens were held in behalf of the right of self-determination for Ireland, and President Taylor himself spoke for the whole country when he said publicly:

I am the decided friend of the repeal of the legislative union between Great Britain and Ireland. I ardently and anxiously hope that it may take place, and I have the utmost confidence that Ireland will have her own parliament in her own capital in a very short time. On this great question I am no half-way man.

It cannot be questioned that all classes of the American people and the public in general would be more outspoken against the betrayal of our principle of the right of self-determination in Ireland if it were not for the fact that the Irish-Americans are protesting themselves so vigorously that other elements, while sympathizing, feel that the vocal part of the protest is being well enough attended to, and are, therefore, turning their attention to the equally shameful betrayals of trust and principle in the Shantung incident, by which Mr. Wilson betrayed China, our friend and ally, to Japan.

Messrs. Lloyd and Lawrence also complain that Senator Walsh's refusal to advocate the present form of the League of Nations is somehow or other inconsistent with his pre-election statement that he was in favor of The National Party platform, which provides, among other things, for the "formation of a union of nations of the world for the purpose of enforcing international equality and the maintenance of peace."

It takes a jaundiced eye to discover anything in the present form of the League of Nations that looks like "the formation of a union of nations of the world for the purpose of enforcing international equality and maintenance of peace." Does a union of five nations, three of whom are imperialistic monarchies and all of whom are now engaged in dividing the world as spoil and loot; and are engaged in twenty-seven petty wars for the purpose of denying the right of self-determination everywhere; and are engaged in an attempt to starve 180,000,000 people in Russia and to deny to the dying millions because the Russian people insist upon a form of government FOR THEMSELVES which big business does not like; does a union of nations which proposes to put another shackle on Ireland and still another on the people of Egypt and still another on the 300,000,000 of people in India, and new shackles on Persia, all British shacks, and a new shackle on the 40,000,000 of Chinese in Shantung and to give the Japanese Buddhists another shackle for the 30,000,000 Christian people in Korea; which has turned over the Hungarian democracy to the ravages of Rumanian soldiery under the control of a Tory governing class and the Hapsburg reaction, look like the "formation of a union of nations of the world for the purpose of enforcing international equality and the maintenance of peace?"

The truth is that the entire liberal world of France, England and America, which united in the support of a League of Nations founded upon the President's fourteen points, has been horrified to find that an attempt is being made to palm off a league of nations which betrays every one of those points, and instead of establishing international equality attempts to establish permanent international inequalities, and instead of promoting peace promotes war, and is nothing less than an imperialistic alliance with four military nations in all respects as bad as the old Holy Alliance and in one respect worse, for it is more hypocritical and relatively more immoral, because it comes a hundred years later, when moral and political standards dwell an arrow's flight above the standards of the time in which the Holy Alliance was formed, startled the world with its siren shriek and expired under a blast from the breath of our President Monroe uttering the Monroe Doctrine.

All liberal citizens will agree with Messrs. Lloyd and Lawrence, and so will Senator Walsh himself, that he is bound by his pledge to support the "formation of a union of nations for the purpose of enforcing international equality and the maintenance of peace." But the monstrosity which appears in the present form of the League of Nations Senator Walsh is bound by this same pledge to oppose, for that pledge is the very antithesis of this League of Nations.

What Else Is There to Do?

Well Done, Thou Good and Faithful Servants

"Loyalty is the priceless gem of chivalry," said Major-General Clarence R. Edwards in speaking of the members of the famous Yankee Division.

If the loyalty of a body of soldiers in a world war is worthy of such a comment, how much more worthy of praise is the loyalty displayed by members of the Boston Police Department who stood firm in the present crisis.

This is particularly true of the patrolmen, a little body of public servants who, despite enormous pressure, remained faithful to their duties and to the oaths which they swore. Many of these men were veterans who through their years of service had formed friendships which they shrink from breaking. They dreaded the enmity and jeers of their fellows, which they knew would be heaped on them. Yet they did their duty as they saw it, quietly and without ostentation. The men knew that they and their families would suffer, but they carried on, courageously and efficiently, confident that what they did was right.

Then there were sergeants who for years had performed special duty and worn civilian clothing. From the bottom of cedar chests and bureau drawers they brought their old uniforms to light. Pressed and cleaned, these uniforms were donned once more, and their owners went forth to do street duty.

The regular sergeants, inspectors and special officers were also called upon to go out into the streets, and a large number of arrests for rioting and hoodlums were made by them.

Captains and lieutenants, as well as loyal policemen of lower grades, took up their quarters in police stations, prepared for any emergency. For days many of them did not see their wives and families, and it was not unusual for these men to wear their clothing for forty-eight hours. Their meals were spasmodic, and they snatched sleep whenever they could.

The division commanders and their assistants, handicapped by lack of men or by inexperienced volunteers, nevertheless presented a staunch front. At first they were unable to handle all the calls made on them, but as volunteers and State Guardsmen arrived the police began to cover more and more territory. At the present time one division is entirely covered by policemen, who are rigging their boxes and performing routine duty. Similar conditions may be expected shortly all over the city.

Throughout the most trying time that Boston has ever known these men have stood firm, faithful to their trust. They have placed the good of city and State above their personal preferences and the arguments of their fellows, and the public may fittingly say:

"Well done, thou good and faithful servants."

Letters to the Editor

Insult to Parents

Editor Boston American:

I have admired the stand your paper always has taken in upholding right and justice, and therefore thought it would be the proper medium through which to vent

what I consider a shameful condition now existing among landlords, i. e., owners of dwelling houses. The majority of "apartments to let" ads. contain the words "adults only," or "no children," and if these stipulations are omitted in the ads, they invariably form the basis for one of the first questions asked a would-be tenant. This to my way of thinking, is nothing more or less than an insult to the American and American parents, and landlords who refuse to let apartments to people because they have children, should be severely punished by law.

What are we going to do with the children? Where are we going to keep them? Or is race outside to be encouraged? It is almost impossible nowadays for people with small children to be able to rent anything but undesirable apartments in undesirable localities, and I think, lawmakers, and those who have the public welfare at heart, cannot see their efforts in any better direction or cause than to fight this scandalous condition, tooth and nail.

R. REASONABLE,

Dorchester.
